

STUBBLEFIELD WIRELESS PHONE

Murray Man Patents Invention to Revolutionize the World.

TALK ACROSS OCEAN.

Assisted By His Son in Perfecting His Wonderful Invention.

Murray, Ky., May 24.—Nathan B. Stubblefield, of this place, was on May 12 granted a patent for a wireless telephone by means of which he claims to be able to transmit messages any distance.

Following is Mr. Stubblefield's own statement:

"You may say that I claim with certain arrangements of apparatus known to myself that I can transmit wireless telephone messages any distance. That certain laws found to exist in my experimenting point to that end, and that I shall be ready in the near future to prove up some interesting improvements."

Mr. Stubblefield, the author of this invention, is the pioneer electrician of this town, and has been an experimenter in electrical science for many years. Nineteen years ago he was the inventor and patentee of the Stubblefield Acoustic-Telephone. Eight years later he invented an electrical battery, patented in the United States, England and Canada. This invention has proved to be the foundation of the present discoveries in wireless telephony.

A few years ago Mr. Stubblefield was the patentee of a similar instrument, but he claims that his latest discovery is a marked improvement over the old one, and that he is now assured that his invention will be worth something to the world as well as to himself.

Mr. Stubblefield has only attained his success by intelligent effort and eternal push. His residence and experiment station are just west of Murray. Here with his family, in almost total seclusion from the rest of the world, he has faithfully carried on his extended research, and here has originated one of the greatest needs of the age, a portable wireless telephone.

CAN TALK ACROSS ATLANTIC.

Mr. Stubblefield says that endeavoring to produce an instrument that would transmit wireless telephone messages he has worked along entirely different lines from all others trying to produce the same effect. And that, while messages have been sent for distances less than ten miles, he is confident that with his machine he can talk across the Atlantic just as well as Marconi with his wireless telegraph.

In speaking of his invention Mr. Stubblefield never fails to give due credit to his son, Bernard B. Stubblefield, now twenty one years of age, who has been his faithful assistant, and who, under his father's instructions, has become an expert electrician.

The financial supporters of Mr. Stubblefield's enterprise, all prominent business and professional men of Murray, are Senator Conn Linn, B. F. Schroeder, R. Downs, J. D. Rowlett, George C. McLarn and John P. McElrath.

When a man writes as follows don't you think he means it? Mr. S. G. Williams, Powderly, Texas, says: "I have suffered for years with Kidney and Bladder trouble, using every preparation I came across and taking many prescriptions all without relief until my attention was called to Pineules. After 30 days' trial ($1.00), I am feeling fine. Money refunded if not satisfied. Sold by Anderson-Fowler Drug Co., Incorporated."

LOSES DAMAGE SUIT.

Former Representative Munnell Willson Loses in Lawsuit vs. I. C. Railroad.

Munnell Willson, former legislator from Hopkins county, who had sued the Illinois Central Railroad for $2,000, charging assault and false arrest, was denied damages by a jury in Judge Gordon's court. The plaintiff said that while on his way to Louisville on a train of the defendant he was falsely accused by a passenger named Steele of having taken his pocketbook containing $127, and that members of the train crew arrested and searched him and only liberated him after reaching here. Upon a former trial of the case the defendant was given a verdict for $1,000, but this was set aside upon representation of the railroad that it had only just been able to locate the passenger who had claimed he was robbed. By the passenger at the last trial the railroad proved that the members of the crew had nothing to do with the arrest resulting from Steele's mistake, but that Steele himself had occasioned the arrest and search.—Louisville Times.

FIGG'S BIG CHIEFS.

Famous Cherokee Indian Ball Club Coming.

The games of baseball to be played here to-morrow afternoon and night between the local team and the Cherokee Indian club is all the talk among the fans and the indications are that the crowd will be very large on the occasion of both contests.

The night game will be entirely new in this city. The Redskins carry with them a complete lighting outfit for the night game and the lights are so distributed over the grounds that the game is played just the same as if it was daylight. Portable seats, with a capacity of 2,000 people, are also carried, thus guaranteeing comfortable seats to all who may attend. The local team will be made up of picked players from the city and from South Kentucky College, and the game will be played on the college grounds.

Gill Edwards will pitch in the first game and Curran, of the college team, will occupy the box in the second contest.

Increase of $90,000 In Assessment.

The board of Tax Supervisors completed their work and made a net increase of $29,200 to the lists of Assessor Haydon. The increases were $35,390 and the decreases $6,190. The final total to be turned over to the Collector, Henry Hurt, on July 1, is $3,630,200. This is an increase of $90,000 over 1907, in spite of the fear that values would show a depreciation by reason of the panic of last fall. To this total is yet to be added the railroad assessments and the franchise assessments from the Auditor's office. The full amount will approximate $3,750,000. The tax levy will be laid next month and will probably be the same as heretofore, $1.50 for all purposes.

RAN GOOD RACE

But Was Defeated by a Narrow Margin.

A. B. Anderson, son-in-law of Mr. Geo. E. Gary, was defeated by a close vote for attorney general, in the Democratic primary at Nashville last week. He ran a close second in a four cornered contest. Mr. Anderson comes out of the race with the reputation of being one of the best public speakers in his state. The American says:

"In the Attorney General race, where, a great deal of interest was centered, A. B. Anderson made a phenomenal race against Jeff McCarn, carrying seventeen wards. J. Washington Moore, who had been looked upon by many as the strongest opponent of McCarn, carried only one ward, the Twenty-fourth, and that by a plurality of one vote over McCarn, who, in turn, received only one vote more than Anderson. Chas. H. Rutherford failed to carry a single ward, though he received an aggregate vote of nearly 2,000. The total vote in this race was McCarn, 4,485; Anderson, 4,187; Moore, 2,814; Rutherford, 1,880."

RATHER SUDDEN

Was the Death of James Fruit.

Mr. James Fruit died rather suddenly Saturday afternoon at his home near Fruit Hill, of locked bowels. He had been sick for several days, but his illness was not considered of a serious nature. On Saturday he grew much worse, however, and death resulted as above stated. He was a twinson of the late Capt. S. T. Fruit and a brother of Mr. Samuel Fruit, of this city. He was 41 years old and had never married. The interment took place in the family burying ground yesterday afternoon.

MOUNTAIN METHODS

Pineville Sun Tells How Night Riders May Be Controlled.

OWN PEOPLE MUST HELP

Tobacco Organization Must Co-Operate With Civil Officers.

The bulletins fetched in by the United States mails from our soldier boys in the night rider war by our special war correspondent are very encouraging. The people of the bluegrass are showing signs of awakening to their full duty as citizens, and the civilizing influence of our mountain soldier boys is beginning to be felt, and it is now hoped that the cruel war will soon be ended. Only a few weeks ago the bluegrass night riders were burning barns and murdering defenseless persons, and scraping tobacco beds, and last week one of our soldier boys shot off his gun on the public highway down in Bracken county and the night riders apparently were so frightened that they made a holloa that could be heard from the mouth of Sandy to Mills Point. It is true that it is a disgrace for our intelligent citizenship in the bluegrass of Kentucky to be placed in a position that foreign soldiery is necessary to preserve law and order and protect lives and property. It is true that Gov. Willson should have exhausted every pacific means to bring about peace before sending in soldiers. It is true that he has made a serious mistake in placing at the head of these soldiers a man to whom the citizens of the bluegrass are personally hostile on account of his record in the last legislature. It is again true that every independent thinker and sympathizer is bound to feel for those who belong to the Society of Equity, and who are honestly trying to whip one of the meanest of all monied monopolies—The American Tobacco Co.

But, after all, who started this trouble? It was the meaner element of law breakers in the organization, and who ought to have been summarily dealt with by the better element in the society, as well as those who have the administration of local government in county affairs. If the better class of people would overlook the mistakes of Gov. Willson and go to work with a hearty will to assist those who are now trying to put down lawlessness and restore peace, instead of criticizing, we think it would not be long before there would be no need for the soldiers. But we do not hope for this at once. There is too much politics, and those who claim to be the better class are too timid. Until the native citizenship becomes brave and broad enough to take matters in their own hands and support the local government nothing can be promised. Soldiers have been sent to the mountains during feud times and, aside from a momentary protection of life and property, no foreign soldier ever contributed at all to breaking up these feuds. They vanished because our mountain people—God bless them—got big enough and broad enough to say: "Thus far you shall go, and no farther," and as "Uncle Remus" says, "no sooner said than done," and the feudist and his kind disappeared. Our bluegrass friends, toward whom we bear an undying love, can profit by this experience.—Pineville Sun.

THREE HEROES

Kentuckians Who Have Risen to the Test of Courage.

After all the notoriety that has come to this State through blood feuds, night riding and corrupt politics, it is a relief to read of the discovery by the Carnegie hero fund of three Kentuckians who are deserving of its awards.

Paul Childers, a sixteen-year-old boy, of Louisville; Marion Clevenger, of Leon, and Clifford V. Graves, of Versailles, comprise the trio whose deeds of valor bring honor to this Commonwealth. Their heroism is that which grows out of a brave spirit facing the sudden extremity that arises in the ordinary routine of the day's work.

Young Childers turned from the commonplace task of milking a cow to break into a burning building, and rescue from the flames two helpless babies. His act displayed not only unusual courage and daring, but a cool discretion that is seldom found in the heads upon such useful shoulders. Wrapping his coat about his face so as to exclude the deadly fire breath from his lungs, he first carried from peril the sleeping infant, and then returning to the scene of danger, saved her little brother from the red tongues that were leaping hungrily about him.

Childers is the stuff of which true manhood is made. Nerve, quick of thought, and with the spirit of self-sacrifice, in mature years there should be a niche for him in the world's work where such splendid qualities will count for all they are worth. It is understood that he is at present studying for a business career. The Carnegie fund, in addition to awarding him a medal of bronze, has placed at his disposal $2,000 to be devoted to his education. The recognition is deserved, and we trust that the boy will benefit by the advantages thus offered him. Louisville is proud of the distinction that he has gained, and prouder still of the prospect of numbering him among the coming men who will help to build her future.

Marion Clevenger, seated on the pilot of an engine, following his vocation as a railroad man, leaned from his seat of peril and with strong hands dragged from the path of the on-coming locomotive the terrified form of a two-year-old child. He had no time to think of heroism. He acted under no inspiration of spectacular environment or cheering crowds. He simply responded to the human instinct that ennobles men, and risked his own life for that of the little one.

Clifford V. Graves, a son of the soil, saw a companion beneath the hoofs of an infuriated bull, whose angry horns would in a moment have ripped out its victim's life, and with no other weapon than a pocket knife attacked the animal. For an instant it looked as if he would die in effort to save another. But his faithful dog came to the rescue and drove off the bull. Graves is awarded a medal, which he richly merited; but to the dog should be paid some tribute of honor for its splendid fidelity to its master.

It is the possession of men and boys such as these that constitutes the strength and hope of any State. There are more like them by the hundred in Kentucky. They only lack the opportunity. But these same sterling qualities applied to the duty of living in the ordinary routine of the day count for more than can be estimated in the making of a people.—Louisville Herald.

Its gentle laxative effects especially recommend it for children. It is pleasant to take. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, whooping cough. Money refunded if not satisfied. PEASANTS ARE HANGED

Russian Court-Martial Sentence For Agrarian Disorders Is Carried Out.

Kherson, Russia, May 22.—Twenty peasants, who took part in recent agrarian disorders in the Katerinoslav district, were hanged here today under decree of a court-martial. They belonged to a peasant association, the avowed object of which was to drive out landed proprietors by the burning of their estates. The resort to the death penalty for agrarian outrages is a new departure, flogging and short terms of imprisonment having been the usual punishment even during the great disorders of 1906.
